Among other things, that is why the film Schindler's List was recorded partly in this district. Now the district is vibrant and comparisons to districts such as London's Soho, Paris ' Latin Quarter, and New York's Village are quickly made!

Pass the remarkable new Houses of Parliament with a lot of glass, masterpiece of architecture. There will be a short stop at Dahlem, where several museums are housed. In eastern half of the city, you will find that under the Communist regime, the architecture is generally either a very drab, institutional style or splendid restorations and recreations of old structures.
